

Camps, Clinics, Schools

Top 10 Sports Officiating fills a critical void in professional and amateur sports by providing innovative educational programs on a national scale. Leagues, conferences, and individual officials alike can rely on a progression of affordable, unbiased, and effective in-person programs to facilitate their officiating goals. Top 10's soon-to-be-accredited programs consist of single-day clinics, off-season training camps, and officiating schools.

Camps

The 10's camps bring aspiring officials together with leaders who are eager to find and develop new talent. Held predominantly in the off-season and spanning two or three days, Top 10 camps often coincide with player camps, providing officials with game experience and the opportunity to be observed and evaluated. Extensive on-field / on-court work is supplemented by the finest classroom instruction available. High-level instructors employ state-of-the-art curriculums, visual presentations, and written materials that are Top 10's trademarks. Top 10's camps are planned with a carefully controlled student-teacher ratio, allowing vital one-on-one instruction and feedback. Officials are exposed to conference supervisors and successful veteran officials, resulting in essential career opportunities and career guidance.

Clinics

Top10's daylong preseason clinics help prepare officials for their upcoming season through an effective mix of new and refresher material. Emphasis is placed on off-season rule or procedural changes. Conducted in a classroom or lecture-hall setting, Top 10's highly professional clinics include extensive use of video and other advanced visual training techniques. The 10's brings national scope to local clinics. Clinic curriculums and programming are developed by the respective Top 10 Education Panels in each sport. Appropriate national, state, and local governing bodies review the work of the Panels to ensure consistency with their officiating policies and ideologies. Nationally recognized instructors then join local association leaders to teach the clinics. As a result of this process, game officials are well prepared to begin the new season and to implement changes and adaptations. As an added benefit, participation in a Top 10 clinic prepares officials to attend a Top 10 camp.
